The closest thing that Canadians have to a nationwide tally of forbidden material is the Canada Border Services Agency's Quarterly List of Admissible and Prohibited Titles, which was known as the List of Material Reviewed by the Prohibited Imports Directorate before 2001. (To subscribe at no cost, write to piu-ujp@cbsa-asfc.gc.ca.)

This periodical lists "hateful" or "obscene" works that were either prohibited or held for examination. Early on, such decisions were attributed to Revenue Minister James McCann, but as of 1985, they've been based on Memorandum D9-1-1. Since then, 59,209 items have been singled out, resulting in 19,618 prohibitions over 37 years. Given that the Vatican's Index Librorum Prohibitorum banned 4,126 titles over 407 years, Canada's border guards have accomplished quite a feat. What's more, the Canadian policy is still being enforced, while the Index was abolished in 1966.

True, there are repeat entries (e.g. Story of O, banned five times before its 1998 acceptance). But many seizures are also unrecorded (as in the 1985-1989 list, which overlooks 1,767 titles covered in the sub-issue of 1985-1986). Hence, a truly exhaustive catalogue would feature many more entries than are currently listed, even if all the duplications were removed. One should also note that several items were inaccurately entered, that multiple copies may have been seized in any instance, and that "admissible" documents were nevertheless held until their release—a process that has been known to take up to a year.

Pour savoir ce qui est saisi ou interdit par le gouvernement canadien, on peut consulter la Liste du matériel examiné par l'Unité des Importations prohibées, devenue en 2001 la Liste trimestrielle des titres admissibles et prohibés de l'Agence des services frontaliers du Canada. (Pour vous abonner sans frais, écrivez à piu-ujp@cbsa-asfc.gc.ca.)

Cette publication couvre ce qui a été interdit ou étudié en tant que matériel haineux ou obscène. Jadis attribuées au ministre du Revenu James McCann, ces décisions s'appuient sur les directives du Mémorandum D9-1-1 dès 1985. Depuis, 59 209 documents en ont fait les frais, ce qui a généré 19 618 prohibitions en 37 ans. Quand on sait que l'Index Librorum Prohibitorum du Vatican a banni 4 126 titres en 407 ans, il devient clair que le Canada ne cède pas sa place – d'autant plus que la politique de censure y est encore en vigueur, alors que l'Index, lui, a été aboli en 1966.

Certes, la Liste se répète parfois (entre autres, Histoire d'O est cinq fois banni, puis admis en 1998). Mais bien des saisies manquent aussi à l'appel (comme dans l'édition récapitulative de 1985-1989, qui ignore 1 767 items de l'édition de 1985-1986). Un catalogue exhaustif comporterait donc beaucoup plus d'entrées que la version actuelle, même si on supprimait les doublons. Notons enfin que bien des titres sont erronément identifiés, que plusieurs exemplaires peuvent chaque fois avoir été ciblés, et que tout item dit «admissible» a quand même été retenu jusqu'à la décision finale – un processus qui prend parfois près d'un an.
